BAHMÜLLER is an internationally active medium-sized family business with over 75 years of experience in the fields of corrugated board processing, precision grinding, automation and precision tools, continues to focus on innovation and continuous development in order to enable sustainable success for its customers. An outstanding example of this innovative strength is the successful integration of Valco Melton into BAHMÜLLER's machine concepts for the corrugated industry.

Successful partnership

BAHMÜLLER has successfully integrated Valco Melton technologies, which were already being used for inline applications, into its production systems. This new project originated from a customer request from the USA, where Valco Melton stands as a leading supplier to the corrugated industry. The integration and implementation process into BAHMÜLLER's TURBOBOX speciality folder technology was quick and efficient. The close cooperation with Valco Melton throughout the entire process - from the initial consultation to the final installation - was rated as extremely positive and goal-oriented by everyone involved.

"The support and service from Valco Melton was outstanding throughout the project. BAHMÜLLER's on-site support in particular accelerated the installation and drove the project forward," explains a BAHMÜLLER spokesperson.

"The installation was completed successfully and we are very pleased with the initial results. Both BAHMÜLLER and the customer have exceeded expectations."

Future prospects

While the long-term success will only be fully assessed over time, we are excited about the market opportunities this integration presents.

"The close partnership with Valco Melton enables us as BAHMÜLLER to offer our customers an even broader range of premium solutions," the spokesperson continued. "With Valco Melton, we now have another first-class supplier for a cold glue system in our portfolio that we can offer our customers with great success in the future."
